Alexander,
M.C., 1909.

TO OUR
BELOVED FRIEND AND HONORED PRESIDENT
OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES,
BISHOP CHARLES BETTS GALLOWAY,
WE RESPECTFULLY
DEDICATE THIS THE FIFTH VOLUME OF THE BOBASHELA.

BISHOP CHARLES BETTS GALLOWAY, D.D., LL.D.

Charles Betts Galloway.

---

“Foremost captain of his time,
Rich in saving common-sense,
And, as the greatest only are,
In his simplicity sublime.”

It is no accident that these lines, written to commemorate the Iron Duke of England, come to our mind when thinking of the Prince of Israel, Mississippi's foremost captain of peace. Bishop Galloway is one of the few many-sided men who are great from every point of view; who do not forget that the Christian minister is also the Christian citizen; who absolutely refuse to narrow their minds and give up to one profession what was meant for mankind.

A Mississippian by birth, growing up to young manhood in the bitter days when we were suffering the aftermath of the most tragic war in history, he has freely given his great mind and heart to the welfare of his State, whether in educational advantages, statesman-like policy, moral improvement, or clerical service. Such abilities could be confined to no one State, and as editor, bishop, orator, and patriot, he soon became a power in the South, the Nation, and in the councils of united Christendom.

From the day that it was definitely determined to establish in the capital of the Magnolia State a college dedicated to broad Christian education, Bishop Galloway has been the honored President of the Board of Trustees, and as successive generations of students have listened to his clear, resonant voice and have heard his eloquent words of wisdom and counsel, there has grown up a deep and abiding affection for “Our Bishop”; and it is with heart-felt love and gratitude for a life of noble service that this volume of the BOBASHELA is dedicated to Bishop Charles Betts Galloway, “for we needs must love the highest when we see it.”

Salutatory.

To its readers the fifth volume of the BOBASHELA extends most cordial greetings; to those who have known its predecessors, to those who now know it for the first time, and to those who may come to know it in the future, we extend that beautiful and expressive Choctaw salutation. May it renew old acquaintances, strengthen the ties of former years, and, in the fullest sense, be "good friends with all whom it may chance to meet." We give this résumé of the passing year to show as best we can how we have spent our time, and to what extent our labors have been rewarded. We present this volume with the hope that in the distant years it may lead Memory back to the "good old days," to friends, to College life and its buoyant hopes; and, best of all, that to it may be the happy task of forming one link in the golden chain of brotherhood uniting MILLSAPS men.

WALTER RALPH APPLEWHITE,
Winona, Mississippi.

"Here Satan said, 'I know this man of old, and for a long time have expected him.'"

"Delia." He thinks his wild-cat yells are singing. Wears loud socks, and is an apostle of Charley and Erskine. He brought the art of loving a girl to this world. His long suit is Latin, making 10 on examination. His studies have never in the least interfered with his other "affairs." As chicken-swiper, his record is peerless. Withal, he has firmness, an affable disposition, and is a well-rounded college man.

THOMAS LOWREY BAILEY,
Mathiston, Mississippi.

"Oh, that my tongue were in the thunder's mouth! then with a passion would I fight the world."

"Bill;" "Judge." Is a born leader and politician; what he doesn't know about politics is torn out of the book. He is fond of praise, and likes to see his name in print. Could make Annanias feel like a Sunday-school teacher. Thinks himself invincible, but has fallen a hopeless victim to Cupid. Walks like an Amæba, and smokes a "big pipe." Has taken a full course in the Lamar Society, having held every office in it one or more times. "Bill" is the best all-round man in College, and has won more honors than any other man in his Class.

JOSEPH HOWARD MOORMAN BROOKS,
Gunnison, Mississippi.

"A true and steady man."

"Whiskers;" "John Henry." Devoted the first two years of his College life to developing a mustache, and was never known to undervalue his good looks. He is a photograph fiend of the first water, and is a lion in The Asylum Heights society. As Grand High Caliph of the Night Riders, he has made an enviable record. Always speaks out when trodden upon. Has a strong attachment for dresses and rocking-chairs. He has a penetrating eye, is whole-souled, generous, and is a good student.

CHARLES CONNOR HAND,
Meridian, Mississippi.

"Little, loud, scholarly, and proud."

"Charley." Youngest man in his Class; was handicapped in that he had to follow Albert. Loved a Co-ed, but— He is an inveterate Prep, and is guaranteed to raise a rough house on shorter notice than any man in his Class. Official adviser to Dr. Swartz's cats. He has a bright mind, but does not believe in overtaxing it. He is full of College spirit and an ardent supporter of Athletics.

B.A.; Athletic Editor Collegian, '08; Class Poet, '07; Class Treasurer, '08; Class Foot-Ball and Base-Ball; Y. M. C. A.; G. L. S.; Kappa Alpha; age, 18; chosen profession, Medicine; Senior Thesis, "American Aristocracy; That of Merit."

WILLIAM CHARLES LEGGETT,
Oxford, Mississippi.

*"Should I like a hermit dwell
On a rock or in a well?"*

"Legs;" "Willie." He does not covet honor; finds much pleasure in associating with self. Decidedly non-amorous; was disappointed in youth. Likes geological trips for Geology's sake. Has seen every League game that has been played in Jackson since he entered school. Is very solicitous to know whether St. Peter furnishes his customers with "Argosies" and strong pipes. "Bill" always looks on the bright side of life. He is the closest student in his Class.

B.S.; Class President, '07; Y. M. C. A.; Class Foot-Ball and Base-Ball; Manager of Senior Basket-Ball Team; age, 25; chosen profession, Medicine; Senior Thesis, "The Impending Danger."

ROBERT JACKSON MULLINS.
Meri ville, Mississippi.

"Sighed and looked and sighed again."

"Bob." Enjoys the distinction of being the only man in his Class who came up from First Prep. Originally from the land of White-Cappers; the climate became rather warm—hence, to Jackson. A sensational knock-out capped his foot-ball career; while unconscious he talked incessantly of Physics, Nell, and Bill. Above all, he is a shark in Geology; also plays second fiddle in the Chemistry Department. "Bob" is genial, modest, and devoted to his work.

BERTHA LOUISE RICKETTS,
Jackson, Mississippi.

"A gentle presence, unpretentious, calm, and mild."

*Most loyal member of '09; beloved by all on account of her gentleness and intellectual attainments. She is a brilliant writer, but is somewhat satirical. The hard work of College life never disturbs her calm, sympathetic nature. Characteristic expression,
"Them are my sentiments."*

B.S.; Class President, '05; Class Poet,
'06-'07; Prophet, '08; Vice-President of French Club, '08; Vice-President Minnehaha Club, '08; Oakley Memorial Scholarship Prize, '06; D. A. R. Medal, '08; Associate Editor Collegian, '08; Assistant in English, '07; Kappa Mu; age, 18; chosen profession, Medicine; Senior Thesis, "The Significance of Irwin Russell in Southern Literature."

RALPH BRIDGER SHARBROUGH,
Hattiesburg, Mississippi.

*"We grant, although he had much wit,
He was very sly in using it."*

"Ralph" is a genius of the type who knows about everybody's business except his own; talks incessantly, and is guaranteed never to know one second what he is going to do the next; was never known to buy a book. After vainly striving for four years, he at last found his counterpart in "Aunt" Jones. He has an affinity for horned toads and snipe-hunting. After all, he has a brilliant mind, and is capable of good work."

B.A.; President L. L. S., '08; Humorous
Editor BOBASHELA, '09; Patriots' Day
Speaker, '09; Class Poet, '08; Y. M. C. A.;
L. L. S.; age, 20; chosen profession, Law;
Senior Thesis, "True History and National Development."

MISS STUDIE PEARL SPANN,
Jackson, Mississippi.

"And the sunshine came along with her."

She boasts of the fact that she has never lost any of her time on that species of the genus homo vulgarly known as "the boys." She has never been happy since Hattie married. Her favorite song is, "Daisies Won't Tell." She is very studious, and was never known to "cut." She is the most conscientious member of '09, and is well liked.

B.S.; Class Historian, '05; Vice-President Senior Class; Assistant in English, '07-'09; age, 23; Senior Thesis, "The Significance of Irwin Russell in Southern Literature."

TOM STENNIS,
De Kalb, Mississippi.

*"His head aglow, his heart I know
Has long been wrapped in calico."*

"Tom" is a product of the free State of Kemper. Constantly boasts of his capacity for love and is a battle-scarred veteran in the same. He is a good disciplinarian, as is evinced by his rulings in the Society. Has an unlimited amount of obstinacy, which he thinks is firmness. His major stunts are performed in right field and in the Natural Science Department. His permanent address is Millsaps College, care of the Chair of Chemistry. "Tom" is well liked and is true-blue to his friends.

B.S.; Varsity Base-Ball, '06; Varsity Basket-Ball, '08; Local Editor Collegian, '09; Athletic Editor BOBASHELA, '09; Patriots' Day Orator, '08; Sophomore Speaker, '07; Mid-Session Debater, '08; Base-Ball Manager, '09; President Senior Class; President G. L. S., '09; Anniversary Orator, '09; Treasurer Y. M. C. A., '08-'09; Delegate to Ruston Conference, '08; G. L. S.; Pi Kappa Alpha; age, 21; chosen profession, Medicine; Senior Thesis, "The Merchant Marine in International Commerce."

WILLIAM AMOS WELCH,
Collins, Mississippi.

"Like a river, largest at its mouth."

"Prep" has been in College off and on ever since it opened; will probably remain over and take special work in the Y. M. C. A. and the Science Department. "Prep" is strictly from Missouri, and at times is the personification of obstinacy. He is a wielder of the Big Stick, and an ardent devotee of Robert's Rules of Order. Has justly won the title of Official Rough-house Raiser. The most enthusiastic man in his Class, and the best rooter in College. His record as a speller and politician will never desert him. He has been one of the corner-stones of the Y. M. C. A., graduating in all its departments. He is accommodating, and will do anything possible for a fellow.

B.S.; President Founders' Hall Club, '06; three years Steward; President G. L. S., '07; President Y. M. C. A., '09; twice a delegate to Ruston Conference; Y. M. C. A. Editor Collegian, '07; Business Manager Collegian, '09; Commencement Debater, '08; Patriots' Day Orator, '07; Right Guard Varsity Foot-Ball, '09; Right Guard Mississippi Team at Ruston Conference; Class Foot-Ball and Base-Ball; Manager Track Team, '09; G. L. S.; Phi Delta; age, 25; chosen profession Y. M. C. A. Secretary; Senior Thesis, "The Preservation of Our Forests."

BASIL FRANKLIN WITT, Sumrall, Mississippi.

"Thy modesty is a candle unto thy merit."

Basil scorns the strenuous life; loves peace and quietude. He is of an amorous nature; not easily angered, but once angered, woe unto the offender who incurs his wrath! Some think him indifferent, but to those who know him best he is a warm and confidential friend. Prefers the less violent forms of Athletics; a shark in the Gym. Always authority on the latest in masculine wearing apparel. Will be just five minutes late when Gabriel sounds his horn. Withal, he is an earnest and diligent student, and worthy of the name he has won. Basil is popular with everybody, and is generous to a fault.

My Love.

---

I love my old Geology
And everything that 's in it;
I always keep it at my side
And read it every minute.

It 's better than a picture-book,
It 's better than a toy,
And as I turn each precious page
My heart is filled with joy.

Oh, see the squid, the darling squid!
A funny kid is he;
The petted, pampered member of
The mollusc family.

Oh, see the shining asteroid
With petals like a flower!
I often gaze upon the page,
Forgetful of the hour.

And when I 'm feeling sorrowful
I know just what I need:
I open my Geology,
And then begin to read.

And so I love Geology
And happily peruse it;
I 'll keep it always at my side
And never will abuse it.

And when I come to pass away
And leave this world of woe,
Just give me my Geology—
I won't care where I go.

Senior Class History.

On the pages of the last three volumes of the BOBASHELA will be found an authentic history of the acts and deeds of the members of this noble band of Naughty-niners during the first years of its existence. It will be sufficient then to refer briefly to the history of that period in order that I may hasten to tell you of their last year in College.

In November, 1905, there gathered together a band of Freshmen, hailing from all regions of Mother Earth—from Russia, from China, from Mt. Nebo, Hominy Ridge, Sullivan's Hollow, and even from the Class of 1908, to make up this mighty body, now known as "Seniors." Our history that year and as Sophomores was fraught with no greater deeds than are usually accredited to "the verdant Freshmen" or "the gay young Sophomores." But as Juniors we saw the need of the College for leaders, so we laid aside our motto, "Where ignorance is bliss, it is folly to be wise," and adopted the more appropriate one, "As we pass through life let us live by the wayside," and proceeded to notify the authorities that in us they had found a Class of real men and women. We voluntarily took it upon ourselves to awaken each morning the sleepy body sitting just in front of us at Chapel by singing our very original "A Hole in the Bottom of the Sea," and in many ways to add sunshine to College life. The modern form of foot-ball not yet being modern enough for us, we refrained from such horrid pastimes, supplying, however, three for the 'Varsity Basket-Ball Team. In oratory, in society, in debate, and in making grades, we excelled, and in every phase of College work could be found the jolly Juniors.

And now we come to the last and greatest period of our life at Millsaps: the period during which we were known as "Grand Old Seniors." Of the sixty Freshmen, only two Co-eds and ten men have stood the test and passed the many Rubicons along the arduous way to Seniordom. Many (like Lot's wife) had stopped to look back and had been turned into pillars of Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors.

When in September we lined up in our long-aspired positions in Section I., we knew that we were entering upon our banner year. In spite of the fact that we were few in number, we were always found fit for the occasion, and we were noted for our unity and class spirit. And our daring and bravery have caused others to look on in admiration. For, like that immortal band, Pickett's Brigade, which, weary from years of struggle and seeing their comrades fall, charged up the hill into the very jaws of death, just so did we charge upon Geology, Political Science, and Chemistry, which still held possession of our diplomas. A record of our noble struggle can be found only on that dignified, self-enunciating volume in the Secretary's office and on the Book kept by good St. Peter, just within the Pearly Gates.

As is natural, the leaders of College life came from the Senior Class, and, as is becoming to our dignity, we have stood aloof from all partisan strife, posing as umpires on such occasions as the annual Sophomore-Freshmen "pitched battles." We have given vent to our loyalty and college-spirit in many ways. Some thought seriously of stopping over for another year to act as pilots; and many nights have we burnt the midnight oil that our Alma Mater might excel.

Our geological tour marks an important period in history. Early in the session we visited several points of interest in the State—the I. I. and C., for example—gathering "data," which will always be very helpful and interesting to us as well as to our State.

It is indeed a great Class. There is not one in College who takes more pride in his class than do the members of Naughty-nine. Our greatness is shown by the attitude of the less fortunate Juniors. Like the spoiled children they are, and forgetting the law, "Obey and respect your superiors," they tried, through their weekly, The Rip-Saw Hoodlum, to appear as great as we. To the eyes of the unappreciative world we may seem ordinary, but we are glad to say that some of its more intelligent men (our Alumni) have awakened to our superiority and true worth and are going to welcome us into their midst by an unprecedented banquet.

Four years of our history are nearing completion; only a few weeks more and our College career will come to an end. Many pages are yet blank, but are to be filled with the doings of a business world. We look forward with much anticipation to the time when we can enter our various life-works; yet we cannot help feeling a tinge of regret that the time of final separation has come. As we bid farewell there comes over each of us

"A feeling of sadness and longing
That is not akin to pain,
And resembles sorrow only
As the mist resembles the rain."

THE HISTORIAN.

Senior Prophecy.

It was the night of June 10th, 1929. In the banquet-hall of the Edwards was a table set for twelve—a long, white table covered with shining silver and sparkling glass. At each end and in the center stood tall vases of fern and yellow roses; the chandeliers were gaily draped with green and gold ribbon; the walls were covered with banners. At the end of the hall was a great white pennant with the legend "MILLSAPS" in purple, and, just beneath, a green one with "CLASS OF '09" written in letters of gold. All was ready and waiting.

Just twenty years before, in that same banquet-hall, just such a table had been set for twelve. Promptly at the stroke of nine a door had opened and in had come the Class of '09. Ten boys and two girls, light-hearted, happy, full of hope, and glad that their school-days were ended, in they came, one by one, till all were gathered around the table. At this their last meeting before they should leave their Alma Mater, another banquet was planned—one to take place just twenty years in the future. The same toastmaster was to preside, the same songs of class and college to be sung, and, last of all, at the calling of the roll, each should rise in his turn and give an account of himself and what he had done. Amid much fun and laughter it was planned—that far-off banquet when each should have realized his hopes and ambitions.

The twenty years had gone and again all was ready and waiting. Promptly at the stroke of nine the door opened as before and in they came. Boys they were no longer—grey beard, bald head, lined and wrinkled face—the passing years had left their marks on all, some smiling and evidently prosperous and others sad, stooping, care-worn. Gathered once more around the table after so many years of separation, they told stories of the long-ago school-days, of pranks played on callow young "Profs," even they now displaying silver threads among the gold.

Finally the master of ceremonies rose to call the roll: "APPLEWHITE."

Down at the other end of the table rose a well-built man, tall, middle-aged, dressed in true Western style, his face and neck tanned to a dark brown. Straightening his bright red tie, smoothing down his tumbled hair, and looking around with an air of perfect assurance and rollicking good-nature, the speaker began:

"Fellows, I never dreamed I 'd have to get up here and tell you that, after all these years, I 'm still a single man. 'Tain't my fault, though. Nearly ten years ago, when I was over in Texarkana, I saw the purtiest little girl in the world; she was a peach—but that don't come in this tale. After I had taught Math a year or two to a set of stupid school-boys, I cut loose and went West—finest place in the world. Say, you can spend the whole day ridin' and shootin' out under the sky, free as a bird. It 's the only life worth living. I 've been there nearly eighteen years now, and never saw the time yet when I couldn't get game enough to give a feller a supper fit for a king. Why, down there on my ranch they ain't another place west of the Mississippi River or this side of Heaven can beat it raisin' cattle and corn. And, fellers, if you ever happen out that way, stop by and I 'll show you the real life on the rolling plain. Maybe the dishes ain't washed every day, but the grub 'll be there, and the welcome, too."

He sat down amid a roar of applause.

"BAILEY."

Whereupon arose a most portly personage in a capacious "Prince Albert." Time and feeding had expanded that once romantic form, the poetic chin of long ago encroached upon the borders of a white cravat. Deep-set wrinkles had gathered around his mouth, his hair was iron gray, but behind the same broad forehead the crafty mind of Bailey was working as of old. With massive head lowered as for a charge, one hand hanging loosely at his side and the other ready to be thrown aloft in the air, he opened his mouth and spoke in a most stately and impressive manner:

"Gentlemen, fellow-classmates, it has been many years since we last met around the festive board. Many changes have taken place in our lives and in the life of our country, and I regret to state that the changes have not all been for the better. Take politics in this State, for example—corrupt, my friends, corrupt. As you all know, I alone among all the candidates for the Legislature from the county of Webster stood for honest, open politics, or something like that, only to go down in defeat before a notoriously worthless scoundrel and a set of scheming, bribing thieves. As Mrs. Bailey said to me the night of the election: 'Defeated, but not dismayed; overcome, but full of courage, Thomas; for RIGHT will conquer in the end'—or something like that. Therefore, my friends, remember this in 1931 when next you go to the polls, and vote for one who stands for the rights of every individual in the great and glorious county of Webster and in the whole State of Mississippi."

Scarcely had the applause ceased when he rose again. "Boys," he said in a timid, hesitating manner, "I hate to leave so soon, but—er—well, the fact is, Mrs. B. prefers to have me home before ten o'clock at night, and, well—if I'm not, I'm afraid it will be exceedingly uncomfortable for me, to say the least—"

"Be seated," interrupted the toastmaster. "BROOKS."

A small, thickset man with a long black beard, a ring of sleek black hair around his head and a white bald plain on top of it, deliberately came to his feet. In a deep, slow voice that lingered long on every word and paused between, he spoke:

"For the last twenty years I have been working as a photographer; I have supported myself and family in comparative ease for fifteen years, and now am ready to retire on an income larger than any I ever dreamed of as a school-boy. On such an occasion I feel that it would not be out of place to state that my total yearly receipts amount often to as much as $500. I feel that I have said enough, and I yield the floor to the next."

"HAND."

A small man came to his feet slowly and lifelessly. There was a weariness in his manner and an expression of disgust with the world and the Class of '09 that caused a feeling of sadness to come over his classmates. Cheeks sunken, deep wrinkles 'round his mouth, hollow eyes—all seemed so different from the gay young "Charlie" of long ago.

Drawing from his breast-pocket a little old lace handkerchief, "Boys," he said, "this is all that I have left to show what I once was—nothing else remains to me of the life I once led. Youth, happiness, friends—all these departed long ago. But I still have left the greatest thing of all." Here his manner changed, a faint color came into his hollow face, his eyes brightened, and with a sudden return to his old quick manner, he drew from another pocket an oblong package. "Here it is! For it I have sacrificed all that I once possessed, for it I have toiled night and day in ill-smelling laboratories. The remainder of my life shall be spent in perfecting it. By means of this one instrument I shall hold the world in the hollow of my hand, the whole scheme of the universe will be changed, and you will live to see it."

He sank back into his chair exhausted, his cheek paled, the light faded from his eyes, and his habitual expression of ennui returned.

There were a few moments of silence, then the name of "LEGGETT" was called. There was no answer. The master of ceremonies drew a letter out of his coat-pocket and read:

"LINCOLN, OKLAHOMA, June 6, 1929.

"To the Class of '09:

"I regret exceedingly that I can not be with you on the night of June 10th, but certain unforeseen events necessitate my absence. Ordinarily my practice would allow me to leave, as most of my patients are at present alive and well; but I have decided that by proper economy two can live on my income, and—well, it will be impossible for me to get off just now, as things seem at last to be coming my way. But you needn't tell her I said so.

"Yours as ever,

W. C. LEGGETT."

"MULLINS."

All eyes were turned with interest on the man who now stood up. He was tall and lean almost to emaciation, his clothes hung on him with a forlorn air, his face was a network of mournful wrinkles, even his eyes seemed to droop at the corners. And when he spoke it seemed as though the sorrows of all the ages had been poured into that one voice.

"Listen to the sad story of my life. Just sixteen years ago on the twenty-first of last month I had finished my electrical course at Cornell and was employed by the Electric Company of Meadville. I was sent out into the suburbs of that great city to mend a transformer; the current was to be off until six o'clock. It was all due to a habit I got into at college—the disastrous habit of working overtime. I picked up the wire and could not let go. It was drizzling rain and not a soul in sight except a young girl who was just then coming 'round the corner. She realized my plight instantly, pulled off her rubber overshoes, and snatched my hands from the wire. When I regained consciousness, several people were trying to help me—but she was gone! Boys,"—here large tears gathered in his dismal eyes and slowly trickled down his cheeks—"boys, I have been looking for her ever since. I have been all over the civilized world and the greater part of Franklin County and I have not found her. I shall spend the rest of my life looking for her—the most beautiful, the most—"

But here he broke down entirely and, sinking back into his chair, sat with drooping head while the other names were called.

"Miss RICKETS," calls the master of ceremonies. All is silent. There goes up a sigh, for each remember how she, in "the good old days," delighted with her verse of wit and humor. Consequently, despite the fact that she is now a great physician, they had expected a poem, for surely the divine spark had kept itself aglow.

The master calls the next name—but hold! there is a rustle without the banquet-hall and all are gladdened with the familiar but long unheard "I 'm comin', Br'er Rob." Greetings being over, her name is again called. And as she arose it seemed to all that she had changed little from the Miss Rickets of our school-days. Time seemed to have laid his hands less heavily upon her than any other member of the class; her hair was still as black and her eyes as bright and cheerful as before.

"I owe you an explanation for my tardiness. As 'Bre'r Rob' and I drove down Capital Street on our way here, we saw a little boy thrown from his horse to the street. We went to his rescue and found that he had a broken arm. Taking him in the carriage, we drove to the Sanitarium, where I dressed his wounds. I could never have enjoyed being with you had I not seen him relieved, for my work—oh! I'm so enamored with my work that I'm happiest when I can do most for suffering man. And listen, I'm going to issue a small volume of poems before long."

The applause was spontaneous; she had always been a favorite.

"SHARBROUGH."

Up he bounced with a start that shook the table. He threw back his head savagely and pushed his hair far enough out of his eyes to look around. When he spoke, his voice was as the voice of Jove, who speaks in thunder:

"I have here a copy of a little book written by myself and just from the press. I have spent all my time for nearly twenty years working on it, supporting myself meantime by selling encyclopædias. It is neatly bound in paper or calf, as you like, only one dollar the copy. I have ordered one thousand copies and tomorrow will set out on horseback to peddle them over the whole State, hoping that by the study of my book the masses may become better educated. I want every member of the Class of '09 to have one; I therefore take great pleasure in presenting to each of you, with the compliments of the author, a copy of Sharbrough's 'Topical Analysis of the Greek Verb,' a humorous poem in blank verse."

The thunder ceased and he dexterously tossed a 500-page volume to each of his hearers.

"MISS SPANN."

As her classmates looked upon her, they found it hard to believe that twenty years had passed since they sat together in the class-room. Save for the little white nurse's cap and kerchief, she was the same.

"Who said 'Miss Spann'?" she quickly answered; "when I haven't been Miss Spann for thirteen years." Here she laughed heartily and, straightening her cap, continued: "I put this on because I wanted to show you I am still proud of my profession, even if I have deserted it; and then, the Doctor likes me to dress up occasionally in my nurse's costume—he says it makes him think of those days so long ago when I was head nurse in the Memphis Sanitarium and he a sentimental young physician. I remember one night not long after I met the Doctor—you know it was a case of love at first sight—a heavenly night it was, the full moon was just rising over the trees and—but really, I mustn't bore you with all this. Just let me say that I could wish nothing better for each of you than a happiness as complete as mine."

"STENNIS."

And, rising with ponderous dignity, the next speaker began:

"I need not say, my comrades, that in some respects the passing years have been most kind to me. Good digestion has waited on appetite, and health on both, and so I stand before you to-day 225 pounds avoirdupois in my stocking feet. Financially I have prospered. On the bonny braes of the Chicafuncty I hold a fair domain of sixty acres, rich of soil and prodigal in crops. Here on a flowery rise, 'far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,' have I built a rustic palace artistically designed for two. Life there has been indeed a dream, a long sweet siesta, where every air was laden with the sighs of dogwood groves and music of sweet birds and murmur of low fountains that broke forth in the midst of roses.

But weight and crops and songs of birds and dogwood blossoms are not all of life. Even Adam was not happy living alone even in Eden, for the poet says: 'Man the hermit sighed till woman smiled.' I also sighed and, to be brief, my sympathetic friends, after a long siege she smiled, once, and then—but I shall grow extravagant or poetic if I don't take care. In a word, then, my friends, I have had a good time. I am justice of the peace and ex-officio notary public for my supervisor's district, and have been prominently mentioned for representative in our next legislature. I have the prettiest wife, the happiest home, the best crop, the fattest cattle, and what one of my neighbors calls the 'egg-layin'est' hens in Kemper County. Come to see me, and Samanthy will set you down to a dinner of spareribs and sausage and chicken pie that would give even a college boy dyspepsia."

"WELCH."

A man of splendid physical proportions responded as though glad of the chance to speak. Save for a few deep wrinkles in his face and for a heavy Vandyke, the years had left him the same old "Prep." He folded his arms and thus addressed the class:

"The question of the hour, my classmates, the question of supreme moment is: 'How many of you are members of the Y. M. C. A.?' Now we have a fine association here in Jackson, but Mrs. Welch and I were saying the other day that we must increase the membership at once and put in that new heating-plant before fall. I am very anxious that my secretaryship prove successful, and if you will pardon any possible inappropriateness, I will circulate my hat and take a few subscriptions, while we all join in singing 'Pass Aroun' Yo' Derby an' We 'll All Give a Chink.'"

This performance over, the name of "WITT" was called.

In the glare of the electric lights he seemed all black and white—neat black suit of clerical cut, neat white tie, neat bald head, glasses balanced neatly on his nose; he was so mild and meek and calm, he looked as though he might be just waiting for the Collegian to come out.

"Boys," he began, "a short while after I finished college I decided to become a preacher—and just here let me say that I have never, for a moment, regretted it. For the first six years after I joined the conference my work was on the smaller circuits, but since then each successive charge has been a better one until now I can reasonably claim to be pastor of the best church in our State." Having thus disposed of himself, he went on to speak of what his classmates had done in the world and of the good that they might yet accomplish, and as he spoke the men and women around the table leaned forward to hear, for he spoke with the eloquence that comes from a sympathetic heart. Even Mullins seemed to forget for the moment his sorrow and Bailey to become unmindful of the impending storm. Tenderly and feelingly he spoke of the years that were gone, and encouragingly and hopefully of the years yet to be. And the voice of the speaker grew more serious as he said at last: "My classmates, let us remember that there is yet another summons which will sometime bring us together. May each one of us at that meeting answer confidently when his name is called."

The orchestra played the opening bars of a well-remembered air and, standing at their places, they sang again the Class Song of old '09.

Will and Testament of the Class of 1909.

In the name of our Alma Mater. Amen.

Realizing the trials and vicissitudes through which the young and untutored mind must pass when embarking upon the vast expanse of College life, and knowing the shoals and quicksands ever standing ready to engulf the fragile bark which, having once entered this ocean, must of necessity remain in constant peril until it reaches its destined harbor; and fully appreciating the support which our beloved and honored Faculty has afforded us in the struggle over which we now stand victorious, we, the Graduating Class of Millsaps College, now about to be ushered forth from the halls of our Alma Mater to enter upon the sterner realities of life, looking back on our College days with feelings of mingled joy and sorrow, now feeling that a devise of the rights and privileges which it has been our pleasure as College students to possess and enjoy will not only be of benefit to our honored tutors and to those who must follow in the paths we have trod, but will preserve and prevent our institution from falling into desuetude, do hereby make, constitute, and ordain this, our last will and testament, in manner and form following:

ITEM I.—To the Class of 1910 we bequeath our Chapel section with its train of pleasant memories and time-honored traditions.

ITEM II.—To Dr. Ackland, in trust for the benefit of future students, we give the College campus at Jackson, Miss., feeling assured that the firm hand, lordly air, and dignified bearing of said Ackland will assure the historic reputation of our beloved campus for future generations.

ITEM III.—To correct certain propensities of R. B. Alexander, ere it be too late, we will to him a copy of T. L. Bailey's masterpiece, "Truth-Telling."

ITEM IV.—Having collected quite a livery of "ponies" and having ridden them safely through the Valley of Classical Shadows over rugged roads, we donate the entire livery for the purpose of establishing a classical shelf in the Carnegie-Millsaps Library, trusting that the students will emulate our example and give them regular and healthful exercise.

ITEM V.—Having on many occasions "cut" our beloved Chemical Laboratory, which folly pains us deeply, we request that the portion of our fees which remain thus unexpended be invested in caffeine to be administered to future Chemistry classes, in order that they may remain awake and neglect not their opportunities.

ITEM VI.—To said Chemistry classes we also will and bequeath our stock of accumulated notes, that they may learn to appreciate the value of notes in this department.

ITEM VII.—To the Freshman Class we make our most important bequest. It pains us deeply to part with the most valuable aid of our College Course, but from our love for Millsaps and deep interest in said Class and its welfare we will to them our beloved "Topical Analysis."

ITEM VIII.—Hardly less valuable to us has been the “Trip to Europe by Post-Card.” To it and its beneficent author and originator we bequeath for its maintenance and improvement the special examination fees of the future students in Anglo-Saxon.

ITEM IX.—Those hearty songs and heart-felt anthems which have ever emanated from that Chapel section in which the Class of 1909 was confined we bequeath to the Glee Club, to be remodeled, revised, and re-sung in future years for the inspiration of College spirit.

ITEM X.—To the Minnehaha and “Prep” Literary Societies we bequeath our skill in debate, our rule-books, and parliamentary lore, trusting that it may stand them in as good stead as it has us in our society days.

ITEM XI.—To future candidates for offices and honors in the Galloway and Lamar Literary Societies we bequeath our store of political schemes and our “wire-pulling” code, by which we have attained those offices which we sought.

ITEM XII.—In the future we would confide the care of all “Preps” who may come to College to Professor Noble, believing that he is peculiarly adapted to the care of young and tender ones and can correct in them any excessive tendency to “sport” loud sox and neckties or conspicuous clothes of any description—a weakness which, allowed to develop in the Préparatory Course, has been shown to work disastrous results by the Sophomore year.

ITEM XIII.—To the College and its student body we give our good-will for all future time.

We do hereby appoint as executors of this, our last will and testament, Dr. W. B. Murrah and Professor R. S. Ricketts, and direct that each of them be required to give bond for $10,000 as security for the faithful execution thereof.

We hereby revoke all other and former wills or codicils by us at any time heretofore made.

In Testimony Whereof, We have hereunto set our hands individually and severally to this, our last will and testament, this the 8th day of June, 1909.

Junior Class History.

The history of the Class of '10 is a long succession of achievements and successes. No preceding class has left a record quite as glorious as ours. Some even say that we have been heard of outside of our own College, and whether this is true or not we are unable to find out, but certainly we have done enough to deserve it.

As Freshmen we came to College in the fall of 1906 and have almost passed through three long years of happy college life, feeling by now that we are a part of everything that pertains to our Alma Mater and that we are nearing the goal of Seniorhood. A few of our number claim to have been "Preps" at one time, but this is hard to conceive of in a class of such dignity. However, we were not in school long before we began to learn the ways of "scholars" and to make ourselves known on the campus.

Probably the best reason why we have accomplished so much has been due to the efficiency of our Co-eds, for ever since we have been in College we have had as our motto, "Let the Co-eds do the work." And they have not only done the work for us, but they have been loyal to everything we have undertaken and are always on hand to "root" for their side in foot-ball and base-ball games.

In class records we are the envy of the Sophomores and Freshmen. They are continually wondering why it is that we can "cut" whenever we please and never have to work. In Latin and Greek we have made some wonderful records, although our names were never read out on the distinction list. We were told by our Professor that we were the best class he ever had in "Trig" and "Analyt," and we were so exceedingly fond of Sophomore Chemistry that nearly half of our number are still pursuing its study.

We have also played a prominent part in literary societies, having furnished men for almost every office, including two presidents and two vice-presidents. We send one man to Southern University this year as Inter-collegiate debater and have two men on Mid-session Debate, and three of the Commencement debaters are taken from our class. Besides this, our men hold several of the most important positions on the Collegian and BOBASHELA staffs.

Our Class is well represented in all kinds of Athletics. Besides winning the base-ball championship as Freshmen, we have performed some remarkable "stunts" in foot-ball this year. We defeated the "Preps" and Freshmen and held the heavy Sophomores to a hard contest for the championship as a result of the good work of our efficient Coach. But they outplayed us and we were forced to see them take off the cup. And, in addition to playing good class foot-ball, we have four men on the 'Varsity team. Another thing that must be mentioned in connection with our athletic record is that our Co-eds won the basket-ball championship in our Sophomore year.

We are furnishing officers and teachers for the Y. M. C. A. and were well represented among the delegates to the Ruston Conference.

But, above all these great things, there is something else that will make our name remembered as long as Millsaps College has a history—namely, the Junior weekly publication, the Purple and White. The fact that we were the first to get up this idea shows that we are an enterprising and progressive class; and, as we are noted for "sticking" together in everything that comes up, I am sure the Junior Class will send some strong and worthy men into every walk of life and that the world will be benefited by our having associated together here.

When the session has ended and each of us has received this blessing, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of the Senior Class," may we each one determine to come back next year with new plans and higher ideals.

HISTORIAN.

A Four-Leaved Clover.

---

I strolled along at even
On the Campus, long ago;
The western sky was radiant
With the sunset's rosy glow.

The great oak-trees were silent,
And the evening air was still,
And all was calm and peaceful
As I stood on College Hill.

I looked at all around me,
At the valley far below—
My heart was filled with sadness,
For I knew that I must go.

At last, when I was weary,
In the grass beneath my feet,
I saw a four-leaved clover,
And I read a message sweet.

Wherever I may wander,
Though in distant lands I roam,
This little four-leaved clover
Is a sign that I'll come home.

History of the Sophomore Class.

There are great moments in the lives of all men, but one of the greatest in the life of the college student is when he returns to College the second year and realizes that he is an "old man." The much-longed-for goal of the preceding year has at last been reached. With this feeling paramount in our hearts we began our Sophomore year.

Last year we were poor little ignorant "Freshies," but now, as that is a thing of the past, we wish to forget it. Since we are Sophomores we glory in our wisdom, and, realizing our dignity, we feel it to be our duty to set a true example of greatness for the coming generations of Freshmen to follow. To be a Sophomore is indeed a great thing, and, in fact, some members of the Class are so glad to be called "Sophs" that they will be given an encore on the Sophomore year.

If you ask the Professors about us, you will find that we are very learned. In Latin and Mathematics there are none like us; in Chemistry we have had only one or two explosions. As to our English, it is useless to tell you, for by reading some of the Sophomore stories that appear each month in the Millsaps Collegian you will find that we have among us some writers who will in the course of time rival the genius of Shakespeare.

But knowledge and learning are not the only fields which have been invaded and conquered by our dauntless young heroes. Under the efficient direction of our Coach, Dr. A. A. Kern, we developed a foot-ball team which not only honored the Class, but reflected great honor on our College. We played a series of games with the other class teams, and not one of them succeeded in making a score. We won the cup easily, and the record that we made will be remembered after our faces are forgotten at Millsaps. About half the men on the 'Varsity Foot-Ball Team are Sophomores. Our Base-Ball Team has been organized, and in our minds there is not the shadow of a doubt that it will uphold our past record and do credit to the Class.

There are many other good things that might be said of our beloved Class, but I feel that this is sufficient. Now let us remember what Millsaps has stood for in the past, and that it is in our power so to cherish those ideals, so to prove the value of the training received here, that in the future our College may, at least to some extent, receive honor in return from the achievements of our later manhood.

"When the last brave word is spoken,
And the day for us is o'er;
When the glass of life is broken
And its sands shall run no more;
When our deeds have been recorded,
Both the evil and the good—
May we ever have left resounded,
'He has done the best he could.'"

A Tin-Type of an Alumnus.

Did you ever rise early on a spring morning, climb the hill that overlooks a fertile valley which is dotted with farm-houses, and there watch the burst of day? Did you ever sit there the whole day through and view the changing panorama till night shrouds the valley in its mantle of black? If so, you have read the story of nations, perused the biography of man, and divined the truth of life. You have beheld the hope and confidence of morning, seen the splendor and sturdiness of noonday, and observed the appalling quiet and gentle submission of eventide. Time is the magician who produced the multitudinous and multifarious changes of the day.

Time cools the volcanic caldron, levels the high mountain, and fills the deep valley; it erects cities where forests stood, makes barren lands once blessed with bounty, and writes the obituaries of passing nations.

Time is a thief who steals while you look him straight in the eye. He is a fleet-footed racer who never tires; a juggler with many tricks. He is a trader who gives experience for innocence, exchanges despondency for hope, displaces vigor and enthusiasm with weakness and reticence, and for the blush of youth trades the sallowness of old age.

A college education is not an antidote for Time's poison and does not render the subject immune from its dreaded effects. The college graduate, buoyant with hope, filled with enthusiasm, steeped in college principles, schooled in perseverance, and inflated with sophomoric gas, is, with all mankind, a victim of Time's decrees. His pet schemes fail, his efforts come to naught, his air-castles are shattered, his ideals retreat like the mirage, and his fortune is ever just at the end of the rainbow.

At graduation he is like the plowman who goes to the field at daybreak. He has confidence in his cause, strength in his body, and purpose in his mind. His ambition is a noble one and his duty to himself and those he loves is sacred. But the morning is cold and his wild Pegasus does not take to his task with becoming fervor. Lack of sympathy between himself and his co-laborer produces a conflict in which there is loss of temper and physical strength; then a fitful start and a hamstring breaks; loss of time is recorded, and another attempt is made only to be stopped short by a backband torn in twain. The trouble is rectified by some homely device, and he begins to take matters more calmly, knowing that all can not be accomplished in one day, when, wham! goes his plow against a hidden snag and out comes his plow beam. By Jove! what now? High noon and nothing done. A new plow must be brought from the village, a new start must be made. But when this is done, we see the setting of the sun, "and the evening and the morning were the first day."

The second is like unto it, except the morning is marked by more deliberation and the evening witnesses a more subdued spirit. Each succeeding day teaches its lesson of endurance, preaches its sermon of self-denial, enforces its principles of coöperation, and clarifies the idea of the real versus the ideal.

The college graduate is as a colt during the first four years of its life. During the first year it collides with walls it can not climb and falls in the middle of ditches it can not jump. During the second it steers shy of its former obstacles, but is torn by the barbed wire, the nature of which it does not know. In the third year it begins to learn that there are limitations beyond which it can not go, but still it is rebellious and champeth nervously at the bit. But in the fourth it learns that it must go the beaten path, submit to the will of others, and be an humble beast of burden.

Such is the story of a graduate's life. For whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be oratory, it shall be hushed; whether there be Latin and Greek, they shall be forgotten; whether there be brass, it shall corrode; whether there be dreams, they shall vanish away.

In college, he saw through a glass darkly, now he sees face to face; then he knew in part, now he knows even as he is known. And now abideth pouting, pessimism, and poverty; but the most inconvenient of these is poverty.

History of the Freshman Class.

The 30th day of September, 1908, will ever be a memorable day in the history of the Class of 1912, for on that day many friendships were begun which will continue to grow through all our lives, and many new students entered the Class who will some day be famous in their professions.

On the opening day the old students eyed with distrust the new ones, for new students always have to prove what they are before they are accepted on terms of friendship. Before many days had passed, however, this unfriendly feeling had worn off, and all were on friendly terms. In due time we organized and chose class colors and a motto.

In our classes we have made records which are little short of marvelous. We are justly proud of them. In our English Class there are several budding Edgar Allan Poes. In History and Mathematics there are those who are a joy and pride of the Professors' hearts. One Professor has spoken of us as the most intelligent Freshman Class he has ever had the pleasure of teaching.

In Athletics we have not accomplished much. On the foot-ball field we did not do anything, having a very light team and no Coach. In the gymnasium, however, we have done better. One of our number is the Manager, and a large number of others have done fine work there.

In the literary societies we have made fine progress. A large number in each society have already shown that they are good orators and debaters. On almost every programme a Freshman is placed. Innumerable incidents might be pointed out which would show the superior knowledge and ability of our Class, but for the rest we will follow the advice of one who has said, "Let another praise thee, and not thine own mouth."

Let us hope that we will all return next year, and have not only a large Sophomore Class, but a good one as well. Let us strive each year to improve ourselves—to put the best we have into College; to "do with our might whatever our hands find to do"; then we will surely get the best results. If we accomplish this purpose, it will indeed be a loss to Millsaps College when the Class of 1912 has left its walls.

LAW CLASS.

Law Class History.

---

My countrymen, a great conspiracy has been formed against those worthy citizens who have sense enough to know that they do not know and honor enough to admit it. These abandoned characters so recently within the city, reveling in the realm of false pretense, have perpetuated many frauds and committed numerous crimes against the welfare of the citizens which history must reveal. Oh, what a crime against the State! The court of equity, ignorant of the heinous crimes and malicious purposes of these disguised desperadoes, has licensed them to take the money of their brethren who live "by the sweat of their brow" in exchange for their pretended knowledge of the Law. What fraud is practiced, and that, too, within the very shadow of the Capitol! For months the lips of the historian have been sealed, but history must reveal the truth.

The extent of the conspiracy is not yet seen. These worthless and disreputable men have so covered their operations that Judges Whitfield and Harper have been deceived in that they have often given high recommendations to these assembled scalawags, even to the extent of saying that they are the best students of Law that have ever attended lectures. What will be the end of these deceiving criminals if they are not restrained?

Poor Anderson! how deceived he is in himself, in that he has been persuaded that his "lean and hungry look" gives him a place with honored Cassius; and that the presidency of his class gives to him the right to repose with the Fathers of honorable and upright lives.

But as to him—J. A. Baker—there is no disputing the fact that he is a common embezzler of the funds of the class, in that he under promise to pay the Moot Court janitor did, by virtue of his office of treasurer, collect money which he did unlawfully expend for the purpose of maintaining himself in his accustomed "sporting appearance"; to-wit: paying the Pressing Club to keep the crease in his trousers. Then with the skilled instinct of the criminal, he attempts to justify this infamous conduct by arguing, "The law is not the law, because it is not right."

Baker, T.—"Hon. Frank" of last year's fame—is the only man whose reputation is not besmirched with criminal deeds. And this reputation, so much deserved, went out to the furthest borders of the State, so that he was called away from his studies long before the first signs of legal learning appeared among his classmates to serve the clients who for many years had been waiting for the "capable one" worthy of their trust.

Browning—the Lover—whose infatuation for himself is exceeded only by his love for the one. He showed some signs of intelligence with much ambitions toward oratory, and had it not been for the frequency of his visits to see her, he might have developed into a lawyer of note; but, alas! like his ancestor, alike of high renown—

"Brightest gem, purest trust in the universe—
All were for him in the kiss of one girl."

But Davis—"Silas" with the Judge, "Si" with the boys—is the only Presidential timber yet developed—if Taft be accepted as a type, but there can be no mistaking that in four years his corpulence will run a close second. Through the influence of his family he was the first to get recognition from the executive office of the State, and he now presides with splendid isolation and great gravity in the office of Notary Public. A great corporation lawyer, with banking as a side line, is his highest ambition.

Chas. E. Gibson—the politician, orator, and most famous man in the Class, but his assumed modesty precludes him from appreciating the real reason for the attention given him on the streets and for the inquiries concerning his every move. His main offense was the profound and unwarranted impression he made when first he tripped with fantastic toe across the legal arena with his Burnsides like the blue flags on a train, put up as a sign of "no danger here." His financial ability is marked and it is said from good authority that he could operate a million-dollar corporation on five cents capital if only you would give him time.

Gillespie—the lawyer by birth (not otherwise). His attendance on class is a pretended sign of study. His greatest fight is the contest of "duty to study" and "inclination toward the theater." His is a checkered career, but the writer is confident that his seeming good conduct is fully explained by two things—his skill in deceiving and his habitual absence from town. For further information, apply to any good citizen of Raymond.

Heslip—"The Pelahatchie Tally"—is famous for his infamy; it is bred in the bone; and, because of his exceeding skill in concealing his ignorance, he was stricken with rheumatism, and though somewhat reformed, he is not yet considered safe enough to be turned loose on the credulous populace. Much of this infamous writing is done from information gathered in numerous conversations with this very brilliantly deceitful character, et seq.

Poor Jackson—whom his fellows for love call "Jack"—is to be pitied to the full extent. He fell from the "Summit" of fame with a perfect record of good deeds and lofty aspirations, but now by his association with abandoned characters he has gone deep into the pit of "Lawyerdom"—more correctly called "Liardom." Despite his previous clear record, he now holds the records of the Class Secretary from which this history is compiled. By his incessant study you would think it not "a weariness of the flesh," but that he ought to be restrained from collecting in his own sinful and selfish mind all the law in the universe, thereby freezing out his unfortunate brethren of less studious habits.

Lauderdale—"The Valley of Praise," which has its sole origin in and is ever tending toward itself. The first made and the latest left of all the liars. His self-satisfaction in his own knowledge and ability renders him incapable of detecting good in others than his own captains in crimes. The arch conspirator, a dangerous man whose unscrupulous bigotry has made him a fearless foe of all the gods. The ancient schoolmaster, the learned lawyer, the profound philosopher in government (?), whose utter disregard for the truth is evident on a casual reference to the Class Prophecy, a singular feat in fraudulent misrepresentation for which he gets the unqualified praise of his cohorts in the conspiracy.

May, as his name signifies, is considered as may, better expressed by (?). He may be "gloriously drunk" or may be "distressingly sober." He may be lawyer, may be mason or otherwise. He may be at class, he may not, but if there is any question about his knowledge of the law or his part in this conspiracy, its solution is may or (?).

Milloy—the humorist and would-be office-holder—may be charged with any crime in the category except false pretense, but honor be to him for not wearing a face of innocence over the heart of a reprobate. Those who trust him do so with notice of fraud written in his face. “Res ipsa loquitur.” Resigning his office of chancery clerk(?), he lost respect for himself and took his part with the abandoned characters gathered together within the city.

The Noble—Chief Justice, profound and loquacious—but it is difficult as yet yet to tell whether he will be a lawyer of renown or a “hardshell” preacher. He has the courage of his conviction, but the main trouble, save in theology, he hasn’t the conviction.

Russell—the “brainy,” full of energy and moved with ambition, a carpenter by nature, a lawyer by mistake. A logical fiend, and worships at the shrine of injustice justified. Carries the air of a keen discerner of thought—id est, is capable of thinking at times. By the earnestness of his facial gestures in the process of thinking you could imagine a Socrates puzzling over the Cosmogony of the Agnostics.

Sexton—and he strayed from the paths of rectitude and mistook the Temple of Justice for a cathedral. His fame rests mainly on his taking offense at Judge Whitfield’s playful thrusts at the Yankee—a liberal reward for a more ludicrous spectacle. Withal a temperance man, at least temperate in his attendance at class and in his knowledge of the law.

“Smith—and a mighty man is he”—in his own conceits. A wrestler and boarding-house keeper. He would believe that he could learn Law if there was any more to learn. Famous for the number and variety of cigar-stubs he can smoke in class; but Gibson explains the fact out of the charitable hearts of his boarders. But whatever be the depravity of the crimes that he commits, it is universally agreed that he shall go unpunished, for be it known that intention to do wrong—or right, as for that matter—is far from a man of such genius.

Thompson—his fame rests upon two things: first, his celerity in evading his paternal duties toward his “three little girls,” and second, his infinite interest in his fellow-revelers in crime. Moot Court his long suit—being at night, it relieves him from his domestic duties. Much given to oratory, inflaming his co-workers of iniquity to higher deeds of villainy, even to the extent of persuading by tearful appeals in getting Turnage back to class. With what unbridled audacity he wears the face of respectability!

Turnage the Great—the unmistakable marks of fame written in his face, reformer, champion of his own rights, a special friend of “Grandma Noel,” to whom he refers all his troubles. “Brilliant and brainie,” he so far outstrips his associates that he is forced to sit by for three months for them to overtake him in deeds of calumny. Already famous as a lawyer and is willing to confer with himself on a legal proposition. Zounds!!! Bur-r-r-r-r Zur-r-r-r-r!!! O my countrymen, as yet the half has not been told! But the mouth of the historian has been sealed. The unscrupulous villain! the disreputable reprobate! the abandoned of the abandoned! The Grand Criminal of the Realm has sued out an injunction against the writer of history! But, O my countrymen, such infamy must be squelched! Such abandoned characters must not be turned loose on the people to plunder and eat up their substance and devour men’s souls!

This cause between A. H. Turnage, the petitioner, and C. H. ## Song.

[This Song was sung by the Senior Class on its return from Columbus.]

Tombigbee banks are wild and bare,
Columbus woods are cold;
And you may gather fossils there,
Would make a fortune, sold.
And as I passed by Science Hall,
Beneath the tall oak tree,
A Senior with a tennis-ball
Was singing merrily.

CHORUS.

Tombigbee banks are wild and bare,
Columbus woods are cold;
I'd rather rove with someone there
Than tread the streets of gold.

Senior! A happy soul is he,
A happy song he sings;
His voice so full of melody
Across the Campus rings.
And as I passed along the way,
And o'er the distant hill,
I heard the sound of music gay—
The Senior singing still.

CHORUS.

Tombigbee banks are wild and bare,
Columbus woods are cold;
Oh, many hearts are broken there
And many fortunes told!

"CO-EDS"

C'est la Vie.

---

Old letters all around me
And scattered on the floor,
I sat beside the window
And read them o'er and o'er.
The rain outside was falling;
I heaved a mournful sigh,
And hung my little kerchief
Upon the chair to dry.
The letters all piled neatly
At last in little rows,
I laid them in a shoe-box,
With many doleful "Ohs!"
I slipped from off my finger
The little diamond ring;
I wrapped it up in paper
And tied it round with string.
At last I put the lid on,
And bade them all adieu;
I took them to the office,
And they went off at two.
Last week I sent the box off—
I know by now it's there,
But if I'd never sent it,
I wonder if I'd care.
To-day I met the postman,
My heart began to beat;
He handed me a postal—
The registry receipt.

The Lamar Literary Society.

---

Organized during the first session of Millsaps, the Lamar Literary Society has ever been an important factor in training the students for the complex duties and responsibilities awaiting them in their various vocations and in the capacity of citizens. Its men have always been at the forefront in contests upon which the reputation of the College depended, and that they have proven themselves worthy is shown by the brilliant record of Millsaps in debate and oratory. For the past five years the representatives to the State Contests and a decided majority of those sent by the College to the various Chautauqua Contests have been Lamar men. Of the honors at home we have always secured a liberal share.

But however great has been the past, its history has been written already; and tough last year was generally considered the most successful in our history, the present session has broken all records. New men of great strength and promise have stepped into our ranks to fill the places of the men we lost from last year's roll. Once more the Faculty has turned to us for men, and this time they not only selected one of our members, Mr. T. L. Bailey, to represent the College at the State Contest, but they also saw fit to choose Mr. John Crisler for the Crystal Springs Chautauqua and Mr. A. B. Campbell for the Hattiesburg Chautauqua.

Never before has our society been freer from politics of the wrong kind than now. In the annual election, which occurred at the beginning of the session, perfect harmony prevailed, and a set of able men were selected to serve in the several capacities, as follows: Anniversarian, T. L. Bailey; orator, J. H. Brooks; Commencement debaters, John Crisler and A. B. Campbell; mid-session debaters, C. E. Johnson and J. M. Guinn. R. J. Mullins, with his colleague from the Galloway Society, will uphold the honor of the College in the Southern-Millsaps Debate at Birmingham, Ala., May 12th. These men doubtless will carry our banner forward to new victories and will add new honors to our already brilliant record.

The year's work within the halls of the Society has been characterized by earnest endeavor and enthusiastic loyalty to our interests, and, under the wise leadership of the men at the helm, progress has been achieved, which we trust will bear fruit both in the College career of our members and in their later life. "Cutting" has been "cut" to a minimum, and, while we regret to say we have some chronic "cutters," the attendance, we are glad to say, has been good for the year.

Indications now point to continued success; and, if our members stand to and abide by all laws, rules, and regulations of our beloved society, keeping in mind our motto, "Nulla palma sine labore," we can face the future with calm courage and most sanguine hopes. Let each member do all in his power to strengthen the habit of the Faculty of looking to us for men for the various contests.

Galloway Literary Society.

Since 1892 the Galloway Literary Society has been instilling into the minds of College men the motto, "Know thy opportunity," and with the progress of time the Society marches on from one victory to another.

Among the men who have won honors in College and have gone out in life and to-day are filling positions of importance in the literary and scientific world will be found the loyal Galloways. Many of them are in the great law-making bodies of our land and in the foremost pulpits of our churches. But the records of those who have gone out from their Alma Mater will be recorded in the history of our country and in the minds of all who come in contact with them in the literary world, so we must not dwell upon them here.

This year there has been much interest manifested in the Society. The very first night marked a most enthusiastic beginning. That was election night and the "whips" were busy, and I dare say the fellows did get a taste of real life in what took place. A man, after spending four years in this Society, will know well the workings and tricks of the politician. The schemes and policies by which many of the fellows reach offices are those such as would cause the real politician to stop and stare in awe and admiration at the ingeniousness of the schoolboy. Yes; the Society trains men in politics, but this is not all.

For three years their sister Society has been prone to hold just any old opinion about some of the great political questions of to-day, and, true to convictions, it has been the ambition of every Galloway to keep his comrades out of such erroneous beliefs. Three years ago their representatives, Messrs. Backstrom and Rousseaux, convinced the Lamars that we should not have an inheritance tax law; again, two years ago Messrs. Terrell and Bullock proved that the United States should neither own nor operate railroads; and on last Commencement, a year ago, Messrs. Moore and Welch produced the argument that forever convinced the world that the Philippine Islands should be retained by the United States. They are masters in other debates—the Millsaps-Southern, for instance. They have never been defeated in this debate.

The Anniversary on the second Friday night of April was the big night of the year with the Society. Mr. Witt and Mr. Stennis were the anniversarian and orator this year. The occasion was one of much pleasure, as well as a very beneficial one. Ruff and his colleague from the Lamars will ably represent us at Birmingham in the Millsaps-Southern University Debate.

The Galloways are playing a powerful part in College life. They fill important places of trust in every department of the work to be done by students. The Collegian and BOBASHELA staffs are supplied with a pro-rata from the Galloways; the Y. M. C. A. finds numbers of its presidents and officers from their ranks; and, in fact, if the Galloways were taken out of College life, like Wordsworth, the fellows would be aware that something was missing.

As we dip into the future as far as human eye can see there looms before us greater possibilities than ever before. When enough Galloways have taken their stand in the world, the war-drum will cease to throb and the battle-flag will be furled forever and forever and the Parliament of Galloway men will realize the federation of the world.

History of Y. M. C. A.

The Young Men's Christian Association was organized in the College soon after it first opened, and it has continued to grow in importance until to-day it is a potent factor, and is now considered as something essential.

The Association is doing more to uplift the moral standing of students than any other organization connected with student life; this is strikingly true here at Millsaps, since it is the one Christian organization of the College.

The work here, as in other places, is carried on by the committee system. The officers, consisting of a President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer, together with the Chairmen of the Bible and Mission Study, Finance, Devotional, and Membership Committees, all constitute the Cabinet of the Association, on which rests the responsibility of the success or failure of the Association and all its institutions.

The devotional meetings of the Association this year have been a marked success; they have been well attended, and much interest has been shown by those who have taken part in the exercises. The men when asked to lead have been enthusiastic and in earnest about the work. A number of fellows have received great benefits by allowing themselves to be developed into leaders through the Association. The Bible Study Department is of the greatest importance, since it is meant to lead every fellow in College to pursue daily systematic Bible study and to give to this study some spiritual meaning which will be of help to the fellows in overcoming evil and in daily living the better life. The Mission Department is of great interest and importance. There is a Missionary Band at the College, who expect to give their lives to foreign work. This year they have nine fellows and among this number is found some of the best talent in College. The study of Missions is pursued by quite a number of the fellows in College, and great good is expected from it.

The interest in the Association is greatly enhanced by sending a number of delegates each year to the Southwestern Students' Conference, held at Ruston, La. This year Messrs. Bufkin, Bailey, Campbell, Peeples, Williams, Mullins, Anderson, Welch, Neill, Ruff, and Wasson, all spent the Christmas holidays at this Convention in the pursuance of courses, which has meant much to them and to the Association. These conferences are meant to train leadership and to instruct fellows how to overcome difficulties in their own Associations.

The Y. M. C. A. now occupies an exalted position at Millsaps and it is doing a work that no other organization can do. With J. M. Guinn, President; D. R. Wasson, Vice-President; C. E. Johnson, Secretary; and F. S. Williams, Treasurer—together with a strong set of committeemen—we have every reason to believe that next year will be a marked success in every respect.

A Summary of Athletics.

The ideal of College Athletics is to furnish diversion, healthful exercise, and physical development for the great body of students, and to encourage a lively interest in a clean, well-fought contest. We do not boast of the ideal at Millsaps, but, in our way, we try to approximate the ideal. Through our system of inter-class games of foot-ball, base-ball, basket-ball, and tennis, we interest a large majority of students.

Our teams are not composed of a few men who make Athletics their sole excuse for being in college, but of men who represent every phase of college activity. The number of men required to fill places on the various class teams calls everybody to the field. Our literary men, our scholarship men, our Y. M. C. A. men, stand foremost in the line-up of our athletic teams.

The true athletic spirit flourishes in our Campus. It needs but a single call to bring out a host of candidates when any athletic venture is proposed. Even those who cannot participate in games because of physical disability lend their voices in encouragement.

Abundant evidence of the presence of this spirit is the zeal with which the student movement for Inter-collegiate Athletics is being prosecuted. The organization of the Purple and White, the College weekly, primarily to wage this fight, may be reckoned as one of the greatest innovations within the recent history of the College. In many ways the paper has already proved a success. Whether we agree with those who are waging the fight for Inter-collegiate Athletics or not, we cannot help but admire their pertinacity in upholding their honest convictions.

Our new Athletic Field, the latest gift of Major Millsaps, will greatly aid the cause of Athletics. The students have again shown their spirit by contributing some $600 toward grading and leveling the ground. Situated as it is on the top of the hill in the rear of the Campus, the field has every advantage of drainage. When the quarter-mile track around it has been completed, it will be ample for every kind of athletic engagement.

* * * * *

This early in the season it is impossible to review all of our inter-class contests. We can but prophesy the outcome of base-ball, basket-ball, and the track. At present each class is strongly represented on the field, and the prospects are favorable for a lively struggle this spring. We can speak briefly, however, of the foot-ball contest last fall.

The season opened with four teams well in the foreground, straining every sinew to win the cup. The Juniors, by virtue of their weight and experience, under the coaching of Professor Moore, gave early promise of being a formidable competitor. The Sophomores, veterans of a year's standing, at once showed readiness in Dr. Kern's superior knowledge of the game. The Freshmen, without a coach, labored under great disadvantage. It was only through Manager Cavett's persistency that the team held together through the season. The Preparatory Team, composed of inexperienced but sturdy, tractable, and determined men, showed an increasing efficiency, which evoked much praise.

After the first series of games had been played, it became evident that the center of interest would be a duel between the Juniors and Sophomores, on which would depend the fate of the championship. A tie game between the principals intensified the interest. A tie game between the Sophomores and "Preps" worked matters up to a fever of expectancy. No one dared to venture a prophecy of the result. In the final games the Sophomores came on the field with their best line-up. They defeated the Juniors in two fair battles, which clearly demonstrated their superiority.

I should mention as points worthy of observation throughout the season the line-bucking of Terrell and Galloway, the end runs of Peeples, the forward passes of Charlton Jones, and the tackling of Buck, B. C., and Falcon.

The observance of Field Day for the first time in several years will add a new feature to the spring Athletics. Prizes will be contested for by the runners, jumpers, and weight-throwers. It is planned to add some comic performances and a short gymnasium programme to complete the day.

We hope that with the possession of our new Athletic Field there will begin period of great athletic prosperity for Millsaps. There is every evidence that this will be the case. The Purple and White will keep our spirit up. The development of our system of inter-class games will call for the best efforts of the students in every form of athletic endeavor.

To ———.

With pleasing doubt and anxious bliss,
My mind divided, stricken through,
Revolves the sweet hypothesis:
If you were I, and I were you.

Through all the realms of college lore
Some sure conclusion I pursue;
The question vexes more and more:
If you were I, and I were you.

In Chemistry no help I find,
Its sage discussions give no clew;
The thought persistent racks my mind:
If you were I, and I were you.

The languages all likewise fail—
Greek, Latin, French, and German, too—
To solve the riddle naught avails:
If you were I, and I were you.

The 'ologies, Ge-, Soci-, Bi-,
And economics, old and new,
With Delphic vagueness make reply:
“If you were I, and I were you.”

Stern Mathematics answers me:
“Your supposition can't be true;
What would become of Q. E. D.
If U were I, and I were U?”

In blank despair I beg and pray:
O Saccharissa, Sallie, Sue!
How would you feel, what would you say,
If you were I, and I were you?

On the wings of my song, heart's dearest,
I would take you away with me—
Away from the world and its sorrows
To an island fair in the sea;

An island of rose-perfumed gardens,
Made bright with the silver moonshine,
Where the lotus-flowers are waiting
To blossom for you, who are mine.

There will we rest, little sister,
In the shade of the great palm-trees
Till the world and its weight of trouble
Are wafted away on the breeze.

Statistics.

---

The average Millsaps student is 19 years, 5 months, 15 days old; 5 feet 9 inches tall; weight, 139 pounds.

96 have blue eyes, 54 brown, 48 gray.

84 have black hair, 81 brown, 18 red, and 10 are "tow-headed."

54 smoke, 23 wear glasses, 25 use "ponies" (some only in emergency).

Favorite professions are: Ministry, 22; Law, 45; Medicine, 25; Teaching, 10; Engineering, 10; Banking, 10.

Favorite type of girl: 70 prefer blondes, 72 brunettes. Many care less for type than for disposition, but their preferences are too varied to mention.

60 have been engaged, 40 are now engaged.

40 get up by 7:00, 78 by 7:30, 60 by 8:00, and the rest "in time for Chapel."

The average annual expenditure is $330.

Favorite authors are Poe and Scott; Swartz, Sullivan, Hinds and Noble, and Spaulding are also very popular.

Favorite occupations at school are playing ball, riding "ponies," waiting for the mail, "sporting," sleeping, reading, and, for our Co-eds, "playing with paper dolls"; studying was mentioned.

Inter-collegiate Athletics was unanimously conceded to be the College's greatest need. The campus improvements and more Co-eds are much in demand.

A vote was taken, in which these were the leading candidates:

Handsomest man, Phillips, W. E.

Brainiest man, Bailey, T. L.

Wittiest man, Gass.

Jolliest man, Kelly.

Windiest man, Welch.

Laziest man, Morse, J. M.

Nerviest man, Huntley.

Most popular man (tie), Bailey, T. L., Campbell, A. B.

Most influential man, Bailey, T. L.

Most conceited men, Duke and Huntley.

Most bashful man, Brabston.

Most solemn man, Guinn (A. F. Moore close second).

Most enthusiastic athlete, Campbell, A. B.

Biggest bully, Welch (Freshman Class).

Master liar (three-cornered tie), Bailey, Alexander, and Kelly.

Master flirt, Huntley (Heidelberg and Brewer tied for second).

Master rooter, Welch.

Master politician, Bailey, T. L.

Master grafters, Kirkland brothers (Glee Club and Lyceum managements ran high).

My Misunderstanding with Miss Melissa Murdock.

Yes, I am a woman-hater. Once I was enamored of womankind. The story of my change of heart, though I may attempt desperately to relate it in a light and humorous way, has an inevitable undercurrent of melancholy.

The event on which as a pivot my affections swung from one extreme to the other occurred when I was a school-boy of seventeen, at Trolleytown. The dramatis personæ of my tragedy are Miss Melissa Murdock, the Rev. Jeremiah Murdock, Mrs. Jeremiah Murdock, Professor Dudley Leslie Turnipseed, and your humble servant.

As I have just hinted, I was a pupil in the Trolleytown High School at that time. Moreover, Professor Dudley Leslie Turnipseed was the First Assistant. Unhappily, the relations existing between that gentleman and myself were not of an entirely harmonious character; this was the case for two reasons: First, the year previous it had been my ill fortune to be, in part, under his instruction, and it had been my ill-concealed opinion that he was a hard and unjust task-master. Some industrious tale-bearer, gathering some of my most unfavorable remarks, and perhaps adding a few original statements to give the tale effectiveness, conveyed the same to the Professor. The result was a heated controversy between us, almost culminating in a hand-to-hand encounter. However, the matter was smoothed over for the time, but there existed still a smouldering mutual dislike. The second and weightier reason is, that he and I both were in love with Miss Melissa Murdock.

Now, Miss Melissa was passing fair. She was a tall, slender beauty, with glorious brown eyes and a most charming smile. She was older than I, but I loved her nevertheless. I dreamed of her by night and thought in loving terms of her by day. Her home—a comfortable-looking white dwelling—was near the school building. Stately oaks and glorious magnolias stood like guardian sentinels around, their massive foliage shielding it from summer heat and from the piercing winter winds alike. Prim boxwood hedges, kept in trim by Melissa herself, bordered the picket fence; modest violets, the objects of the same angel's care, nestled in beds of various mathematical shapes about the yard; and by the flight of steps that led to the porch were clumps of rose-bushes, planted by Melissa's lovely hand. Vividly I recall the time when it was my habit to slip away at recesses, and sitting underneath those trees, inhaling the delicious odors of the place, and entranced by my sweetheart's wit and beauty, I whiled away the moments allotted to me for a book education. Melissa's beautiful face, expressive of gentle sympathy as I poured forth my complaints against the pusillanimous Turnipseed, or of sparkling mirth as I told my funny jokes, confronts me in memory now as then it confronted me in reality.

Something, too, should be said of her father, the Rev. Jeremiah. This gentleman, as I have previously stated, was a Baptist minister. In personal appearance, he was awe-inspiring, though perhaps the relation he sustained to Melissa had something to do with the feeling he inspired in me. A tall, gaunt, slightly-humped figure, a keen face set considerably forward on the shoulders, a pair of small, sharp, black eyes, which peered eagerly and restlessly from two caverns overhung by bushy eyebrows and separated by a large, slightly hooked nose, and a mouth indicative of great firmness, were the most striking features of his make-up. His manner, too, was authoritative. Seemingly conscious of his divine rights as one of the elect, his words had an authoritative ring and a dogmatic positiveness.

Now, the Rev. Jeremiah was interested in me. Of course, I thought this was proof positive that my attentions to Melissa were regarded with favor. But he was also on good terms with the hateful Turnipseed; this I accounted for, though, on the ground that, as Turnipseed was his Sunday-school superintendent, it was the part of policy to maintain such friendly relations. There could certainly be no politic motive to inspire his interest in me. In an unobtrusive way he sought my companionship. As he, like several other members of his calling, was fond of theological disputation, he and I passed many pleasant moments sitting on the post-office porch or strolling along the shady roads engaged in debating the differences in the creeds of our respective denominations. I assumed the rôle of an anxious inquirer after truth, and though my usual manner of debate had always been heated and boisterous, to the Rev. Jeremiah my opinions were faltered in such an apologetic way as, I think, led him to consider me as doubtful of their validity, and to regard me as a probable convert to his views. The reverend gentleman had a "better half," so quiet and shy that few people knew her very well. I knew, however, that she was a good cook, on the evidence of cakes and other delicacies which Melissa used to transfer from the kitchen to the parlor when I called.

"Things are going my way," so I thought, and so my chums assured me—the very natural inference, from the good treatment I was receiving at the hands of Melissa and her parents. But how suddenly and how completely many of our fairest hopes are crushed!

It happened because I overestimated the ability of woman to take a joke. Melissa had always been particularly fond of my wit; as this was a faculty with which I supposed myself abundantly gifted and of which I was immoderately vain, her responsiveness to my witty sallies had always been especially pleasing to me; so much so that, in my endeavor to be amusing, I entirely upset my beautiful air-castle.

This was the way of it: We boys planned a swell party to come off shortly after Commencement. In order that none of the girls might be slighted, we made a list of names, arranged in alphabetical order, and we boys, beginning in reverse alphabetical order, checked off the names of our partners for the occasion. Much to my satisfaction, it fell to me to escort Miss Melissa. During the rush and excitement of Commencement week, however, many of us failed to write the customary note. Owing to the prominent part which I took in the Commencement exercises (this was my graduating year), I was unusually laggard. On the last day of the exercises a chum came to me and said that some of the girls were "mighty mad because the boys were so slow," and that Melissa was one of the indignant crowd. Then, struck by an inspiration, I sat down and penned the following note:

"MY DEAREST MELISSA,—To-morrow night at Mr. Joshua Bang's there will be a party given in celebration of the passing out of the old and the coming in of the new. This, of course, means the passing away of school-days and the coming in of vacation; also the passing away of old maids and bachelors and the ushering in of a younger generation of belles and beaux. Will you be so gracious as to honor me with your company on that occasion?

"Very devotedly yours,

JOHN W. NEWTON."

The reply soon arrived:

"MR. NEWTON,—Your note requesting my company to the party to-morrow night received. The language you use shows that you are undoubtedly under the influence of intoxicants. No, sir, I will not honor your request! You may seek company among the 'younger set,' where perhaps there are fewer scruples against such conduct.
(MISS) MELISSA MURDOCK."

I stood amazed. Melissa had misunderstood me. She thought that I meant to intimate that she was an old maid! It made me indignant to think that she could have such an opinion of me, since she knew that my conduct had always been gentlemanly before. This thought kept me from rushing over at once and righting matters. I determined to hold myself aloof from her, to treat her with the coolness of an iceberg.

On the night of the party I was humiliated to see Melissa paying the same rapt attention to Turnipseed that she once paid to me. In vain I tried to affect indifference. At the earliest opportunity I stole away and in solitude meditated in bitterness of spirit over my unhappy condition.

A long lonesome summer dragged slowly by. Melissa's company had not cheered me, nor had the Rev. Jeremiah sought my company during that time. Indeed, my reverend friend had been heard to make harsh criticisms concerning me. But, what was hardest to bear, the Professor was now a regular caller at the Murdock home.

One day I passed Melissa on the street. She smiled sweetly and spoke to me, for the first time that summer. The same day my chum Jim Powell told me in confidence that he had good reason to believe that Melissa wanted to make up, but no amount of questioning could make Jim divulge the secret. My hopes began to revive. The next day I received a letter; it was in a large square envelope; the superscription was Melissa's handwriting. I opened it—another envelope! I opened that and pulled out a stiff sheet on which was inscribed the following:

"Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Murdock request your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Melissa Mariah, to Professor Dudley Leslie Turnipseed, at their residence, on the 28th inst., at 8 o'clock P. M."

Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen

Find this imprint on a fountain pen and you will find the one that is popular for what it does—not for what it is said to do.

The pocket necessity that everyone should possess. Five simple workmanlike parts made from the best grade of Para rubber, highly polished; assembled in a precise but simple manner, with a gold pen point tipped with selected hard iridium. Will last for a lifetime, and always write perfectly, just when required. Ask to see the Clip-Cap.

Sold by the best dealers everywhere.

RIFLES for ALL KINDS of HUNTING

TEN MODELS TO SELECT FROM

From the ten different models of Winchester repeaters you can surely select a rifle adapted for hunting your favorite game, be it squirrels or grizzly bears. Winchester rifles are made for low, medium and high power cartridges in all desirable calibers, from .22 to .50, and in styles and weights to suit a wide diversity of tastes. No matter which model, caliber or style you select, you can count on its being well made, accurate and reliable. The rough, hard usage that hunting rifles often receive requires them to be constructed on sound mechanical principles and of the best materials. All Winchester rifles are so made. Strength, accuracy, reliability of operation and general finish are all given careful attention. Nothing is left undone that will make them shoot well, work well, look well and wear well. ♡ ♡ ♡ ♡
